

Start Closing Skills Gaps With an AWS Learning Needs Analysis

Accelerate your understanding of your organization's training needs

Amazon Web Services (AWS) was the original cloud platform and is still a leading platform for cloud services today. As AWS continues to expand its reach and capabilities, organizations that rely on AWS must keep updating their skills in order to realize the full potential of the platform.

Updating those skills begins with identifying any skills that might be missing. To help with that crucial step, organizations now have the opportunity to complete an AWS Learning Needs Analysis (LNA), which assesses team capabilities and recommends specific training to help close identified skills gaps.

The AWS LNA consists of three steps:

Gather data about current skills

Your teams are invited to complete an online self-assessment that covers essential AWS cloud roles and responsibilities. It's a quick survey that takes between five and 20 minutes to finish.

Analyze the findings

The AWS LNA service reviews and analyzes the full array of data gathered from the self-assessments and then generates a detailed formal report that outlines strengths, identifies skills gaps and recommends additional follow-up training as needed.

Present a customized training plan

With recommendations in hand from the AWS LNA, ExitCertified structures a customized training plan to remedy your organization's AWS skills gaps and address your strategic business goals.

As an authorized training partner for AWS, ExitCertified is uniquely qualified to be your AWS training provider, offering more than two dozen AWS-approved courses and certifications. In addition, we were named AWS Americas Training Partner of the Year for 2019.
